We demonstrate the presence of cytochrome c in rat seminiferous tubules. The specific coloration of the mitochondria in the Sertoli cells and the spermatocytes with the use of a specific stain, hematoxylineosin, show that cytochrome c is located on the outer membranes of these cells. The age-related changes in the cytochrome c content in the rat seminiferous tubules and the variations in the intensity of the specific staining and the distribution of cytochrome c were assessed. The cytochrome c content in the seminiferous tubules of the young animals is comparable to that in non-pregnant rats. As the animals age, cytochrome c in the seminiferous tubules decreases with the exception of the pachytene spermatocytes. The obtained data on the qualitative pattern of the cytochrome c distribution indicate that the testicular cytochrome c content is correlated with the germ cell maturation.Wednesday, December 8, 2015 Alternative
